DID YOU KNOW

Aside from hydration, acclimatization is the most important factor when it comes to avoiding heat related illnesses and fatalities. As June brings on the Summer heat, it's important to hold yourself and your team back from jumping back into the swing of things without acclimating to higher temperatures. This means creating a plan to gradually build up an exposure to heat over 7-14 days. Up to 70% of heat related fatalities occur within the first few days of Summer when workers are just being exposed to hotter working conditions for either the first time ever or since the previous Summer. This number can be reduced drastically with proper planning, caution, and patience.
